Bayou Bridges Louisiana Social Studies, Grade 6

Introduction

ABOUT THIS UNIT

The Big Idea

The Constitution and its Bill of Rights shape the U.S. government.

After the Constitutional Convention approved a draft of the Constitution, the document went to the states for their review and ratification votes. During this process, a debate between the Federalists (who favored the Constitution as it was written) and the Anti-Federalists (who opposed the Constitution as it was written) led to the addition of the Bill of Rights after ratification. The new government created by the Constitution was organized according to the principles of popular sovereignty, limited government, federalism, separation of powers, and checks and balances—a governmental system that continues today.

What Teachers Need to Know

Each chapter of the Teacher Guide is accompanied by a brief What Teachers Need to Know document that provides background information related to the chapter content. The background information will summarize the chapter content and provide some additional details or explanation. These documents are not meant to be complete histories but rather memory refreshers to help provide context for what students are learning. For fuller, more detailed explanations, see the list of recommended books in this Introduction.

To find the What Teachers Need to Know documents, look for the link to download the Bayou Bridges Online Resources at the beginning of each chapter.

The Government of the New Nation Student Reader—two chapters

Teacher Components

The Government of the New Nation Teacher Guide—two chapters. The guide includes lessons aligned to each chapter of The Government of the New Nation Student Reader, with a daily Check for Understanding and Additional Activities, such as vocabulary practice, primary source analysis, literature connections, and virtual field trips, designed to reinforce the chapter content. Chapter Assessments, a Performance Task Assessment, and Activity Pages are included in Teacher Resources, beginning on page 38.

- The Chapter Assessments test knowledge of each chapter using standard testing formats.
- The Performance Task Assessment requires students to apply and share the knowledge learned during the unit through either an oral or a written presentation.
- The Activity Pages are designed to support, reinforce, and extend content taught in specific chapters throughout the unit.

The Government of the New Nation Timeline Card Slide Deck—eight individual images depicting significant events, individuals, and concepts related to the United States government and how it came to be. In addition to an image, each card contains a caption, a chapter number, and the Framing Question, which outlines the focus of the chapter. The Teacher Guide will prompt you, lesson by lesson, as to which card(s) to display. The Timeline Cards will be a powerful learning tool, enabling you and your students to track important themes and events as they occurred within this time period.

Use this link to download the Bayou Bridges Online Resources for this unit, where the specific link to the Timeline Card Slide Deck may be found:

<https://www.coreknowledge.org/bayou-bridges-online-resources/>

You may wish to print the Timeline Cards to create a physical timeline in your classroom. To do so, you will need to identify available wall space in your classroom on which you can post the Timeline Cards over the course of the unit. The timeline may be oriented either vertically or horizontally, even wrapping around corners and multiple walls—whatever works best in your classroom setting. Be creative; some teachers hang a clothesline so that the image cards can be attached with clothespins!

The Timeline in Relation to Content in the Student Reader

The Unit 6 Timeline Cards are a mix of chronological events and political concepts. For this reason, the Chapter 1 Timeline Cards include dates and illustrate a chronology of events. The cards for Chapter 2, however, identify key concepts in American government. These concepts are essentially timeless, so there is no chronology to assign.

Understanding References to Time in The Government of the New Nation Unit

As you read the text, you will become aware that in some instances general time periods are referenced, and in other instances specific dates are cited. That is because the text discusses both trends over time and specific events. For example, the Constitution was debated from 1787 to 1790, but the Bill of Rights was added in 1791.

Time to Talk About Time

Before you use the Timeline Cards, discuss with students the concept of time and how it is recorded. Here are several discussion points that you might use to promote discussion. This discussion will allow students to explore the concept of time.

1. What is time?
2. How do we measure time?
3. How do we record time?
4. How does nature show the passing of time? (Encourage students to think about days, months, and seasons.)

5. What is a specific date?
6. What is a time period?
7. What is the difference between a specific date and a time period?
8. What is a timeline?

USING THE TEACHER GUIDE

Pacing Guide

The Government of the New Nation unit is one of six history and geography units in the Grade 6 Bayou Bridges Louisiana Social Studies Curriculum. A total of twenty-five days has been allocated to The Government of the New Nation unit. We recommend that you do not exceed this number of instructional days to ensure that you have sufficient instructional time to complete all Grade 6 units.

At the end of this Introduction, you will find a Sample Pacing Guide that provides guidance as to how you might select and use the various resources in this unit during the allotted time. However, there are many options and ways that you may choose to individualize this unit for your students, based on their interests and needs, so we have also provided you with a blank pacing guide that you may use to reflect the activity choices and pacing for your class. If you plan to create a customized pacing guide for your class, we strongly recommend that you preview this entire unit and create your pacing guide before teaching the first chapter.

Reading Aloud

Cognitive science suggests that even in the later elementary grades and into middle school, students' listening comprehension still surpasses their independent reading comprehension (Sticht, 1984).

For this reason, in the Bayou Bridges Curriculum Series, reading aloud continues to be used as an instructional approach in these grades to ensure that students fully grasp the content presented in each chapter. Students will typically be directed to read specific sections of each chapter quietly to themselves, while other sections will be read aloud by the teacher or student volunteers. When you or a student reads aloud, always prompt students to follow along. By following along in this way, students become more focused on the text and may acquire a greater understanding of the content.

Building Reading Endurance and Comprehension

The ultimate goal for each student is to be capable of reading an entire chapter independently with complete comprehension of the subject matter. Therefore, while it is important to scaffold instruction as described above to ensure that students understand the content, it is also important to balance this approach by providing opportunities for students to practice reading longer and longer passages entirely on their own.

One or more chapters in each Grade 6 Bayou Bridges unit will be designated as an Independent Reading Lesson, in which students are asked to read an entire chapter on their own before engaging in any discussion about the chapter.

A  adjacent to a lesson title will indicate that it is recommended that students read the entire chapter independently.

During each Independent Reading Lesson, students should be asked to complete some type of note-taking activity as they read independently to focus their attention on key details in the chapter. They will also respond, as usual, by writing a response to the lesson's Check for Understanding.

It will be especially important for you to review all students' written responses to any Independent Reading Lesson prior to the next day's lesson to ascertain whether all students are able to read and engage with the text independently and still demonstrate understanding of the content.

If one or more students struggle to maintain comprehension when asked to read an entire chapter independently, we recommend that during the next Independent Reading Lesson opportunity, you pull these students into a small group. Then, while the remainder of the class works independently, you can work with the small group using the Guided Reading Supports that are still included in the Teacher Guide for each lesson.

Picture This

During the reading of each section of the chapter, pause periodically to check student comprehension. One quick and easy way to do this is to have students describe what they see in their minds when reading a particular paragraph. Students who struggle to identify images may need a bit more support.

Turn and Talk

After the reading of each section of the chapter, whether silently or aloud, Guided Reading Supports will prompt you to pose specific questions about what students have just read. Rather than simply calling on a single student to respond, provide students with opportunities to discuss the questions in pairs or in groups. Discussion opportunities will allow students to more fully engage with the content and will bring to life the themes or topics being discussed. This scaffolded approach—reading manageable sections of each chapter and then discussing what has been read—is an effective and efficient way to ensure that all students understand the content before proceeding to the remainder of the chapter.

For more about classroom discussions, including an evaluation rubric, download the Bayou Bridges Online Resource "About Class Discussions and Debates":

<https://www.coreknowledge.org/bayou-bridges-online-resources/>

Primary Sources

Most chapters include a Student Reader feature and Additional Activities built around the exploration of primary sources. Primary sources are an essential part of understanding history. They are a window to the past and provide a deeper understanding of the human experience. Students are encouraged to explore these sources through the structured activities provided in each chapter.

For more about primary sources, download the Bayou Bridges Online Resource “About Teaching with Primary Sources”:

<https://www.coreknowledge.org/bayou-bridges-online-resources/>

To facilitate student engagement with these primary sources, a Primary Source Analysis Activity Page has been provided in the Teacher Resources for this unit. You may also wish to explore the primary source analysis handouts from the National Archives, the UCI History Project, the Library of Congress, and the U.S. House of Representatives Archives, links to which can be found in the Online Resources for this unit.

Framing Questions

At the beginning of each Teacher Guide chapter, you will find a Framing Question, also found at the beginning of each Student Reader chapter. The Framing Questions are provided to help establish the bigger concepts and to provide a general overview of the chapter. The Framing Questions, by chapter, are:

Chapter	The Framing Question
1	How did the debate between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists lead to the Bill of Rights?
2	What is the structure of the U.S. government, and how does it function?

Core Vocabulary

Domain-specific vocabulary, phrases, and idioms highlighted in each chapter of the Student Reader are listed at the beginning of each Teacher Guide chapter, in the order in which they appear in the Student Reader. Student Reader page numbers are also provided. The vocabulary, by chapter, are:

Chapter	Core Vocabulary
1	ratify, nonpartisan, probable cause, judicial review
2	popular sovereignty, rule of law, federalism, checks and balances, appropriation, budget, levy, oversight, executive order, appeal, original jurisdiction, popular vote, enumerated powers, reserved powers, concurrent powers

Activity Pages

The following Activity Pages can be found in Teacher Resources, pages 51–61. They are to be used with the chapter specified for either Guided Reading Support, Additional Activities, or homework. Be sure to make sufficient copies for your students prior to conducting the guided reading or activities.

- Chapter 1—Letter to Family (AP 1.1)
- Chapters 1–2—Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2)
- Chapter 2—Claims and Evidence (AP 1.3)

- Chapter 1—Federalist No. 51 (AP 1.6)
- Chapter 2—Three Branches of Government (AP 2.1)
- Chapter 2—Domain Vocabulary: Chapters 1–2 (AP 2.2)

Additional Activities and Website Links

A link to Additional Activities may be found at the end of each chapter in this Teacher Guide. While there are multiple suggested activities for this unit, you should choose activities to complete based on your available instructional time and your students' interests and needs. Many of the activities include website links, and you should check the links prior to using them in class.

Many chapters include activities marked with a . This icon indicates a preferred activity. We strongly recommend including these activities in your lesson planning.

A SPECIAL NOTE ABOUT THE FREEDOM FRAMEWORK

A critical goal of the Bayou Bridges Curriculum Series, of which these materials are a part, is to ensure that students acquire the foundational knowledge needed to become literate citizens able to contribute to a democratic society.

We have therefore included an important feature in every U.S. history unit called “The Freedom Framework,” readily distinguished by an icon of the American flag. The specific knowledge, questions, and activities identified by this icon denote opportunities to engage students and deepen their understanding of the historical events, laws, and structure of the U.S. government.

THE CORE LESSON 35 MIN

Introduce The Government of the New Nation Student Reader

5 MIN

Distribute copies of The Government of the New Nation Student Reader. Suggest students take a few minutes to look at the cover and flip through the Table of Contents and the images in the book. Ask students to brainstorm individual words or simple phrases describing what they notice in the Table of Contents and various illustrations; record this information in a list on the board or chart paper. Students will likely mention the diagrams and maps showing ratification and the table listing the Bill of Rights.

Introduce “Federalists, Anti-Federalists, and the Bill of Rights”

5 MIN

Review what students read in Unit 5 about the Articles of Confederation, its weaknesses, and the decision to replace it with a new plan of government: the Constitution. Review the compromises that shaped the new plan of government, and explain that once written, the Constitution was presented to the states for approval. That’s where this chapter picks up the story.

Call students’ attention to the Framing Question. Tell students to pay attention to the points made by both the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists about what government should and should not be able to do and how this debate was resolved.

Guided Reading Supports for “Federalists, Anti-Federalists, and the Bill of Rights”

25 MIN

When you or a student reads aloud, always prompt students to follow along. By following along, students may acquire a greater understanding of the content. Remember to provide discussion opportunities.

“Learning to Compromise,” pages 2–4

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Invite volunteers to read the section on pages 2–4 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term ratify, and explain its meaning.

SUPPORT—Point out the diagram on page 4. Use it to review the ratification process: (1) the Constitutional Convention sent the final draft of the Constitution to the states; (2) each state held a ratifying convention, where state delegates debated and then voted whether to ratify, or approve, the Constitution; (3) once nine states voted to ratify, the Constitution became the official law of the land.

After the volunteers read the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—How many states were required to ratify the Constitution for it to become law? (6.12)

» Nine states were required to ratify the Constitution for it to become law.

EVALUATIVE—Why didn’t the Constitutional Convention require that all states ratify the Constitution before it became law? (6.12, 6.12.a)

» The Constitutional Convention did not require all states to ratify the Constitution because having all states ratify the Articles of Confederation had taken years, and they did not want to wait that long.

“The Federalists and the Anti-Federalists,” pages 4–9

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Have students read the first four paragraphs of the section on pages 4–6 with a partner.

SUPPORT—Explain that commerce means trade, as in buying and selling goods and services.

SUPPORT—Help students remember the difference between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists by reminding them that the prefix anti- means against. The Federalists were in favor of ratifying the Constitution, whereas the Anti-Federalists were against ratification.

Have students read the remainder of the section on pages 6–9 with a partner.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term nonpartisan, and explain its meaning.

SUPPORT—Explain that nonpartisan is not the same as bipartisan. Nonpartisan means not involving any political party. Bipartisan means involving members of both major political parties.

SUPPORT—Display the Gilder Lehrman Institute infographic “Differences Between Federalists and Antifederalists,” and use it review the differences between the two groups.

SUPPORT—Draw students’ attention to the chart on page 7. Ask students how The Federalist Papers explain that the American government would not end up run by a single bad leader like the British government they had just broken away from. (Federalist Number 51 argues that the separation of powers and checks and balances in the Constitution prevent any one part of the government from becoming too powerful.) (6.12.h, 6.12.j)

SUPPORT—Display the Timeline Card about the Federalist and Anti-Federalist debate. Point out the cartoon on the card. Ask students what the columns represent. (the states) Explain that this cartoon is from June 1788. Have students refer to the map on page 8, and explain what the states in the standing columns have in common. (They have voted to ratify the Constitution.) What is the cartoon suggesting about Virginia and New Hampshire? (They will not ratify the Constitution.) What does this mean for the country? (It will fall apart.)

Note: You may wish to have students complete a National Archives’ Analyze a Cartoon worksheet about the image.

SUPPORT—Draw students’ attention to the map on page 8. Name the first nine states that voted in favor of ratification—Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Georgia, Maryland, South Carolina, and New Hampshire—and have students point to them on the map. Which state was the first to ratify? (Delaware) Which was the last? (Rhode Island) (6.4, 6.5, 6.12)

After students read the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—What were The Federalist Papers? (6.12.e, 6.12.h)

» The Federalist Papers were essays meant to convince people to vote in favor of ratifying the Constitution.

EVALUATIVE—Why were Virginia and Massachusetts important to the ratification process? (6.12.h, 6.12.i)

» Virginia and Massachusetts were important to the ratification process because they were states with large populations. If they voted to ratify the Constitution, then it was likely that other states would follow suit.

EVALUATIVE—Why were leading Virginians wary of the Constitution? (6.12.e, 6.12.f, 6.12.h)

- » Virginians were wary of the Constitution because it did not include a bill of rights, and they did not want a powerful government without powerful protections for individuals.

EVALUATIVE—Why did Federalists such as James Wilson argue that the preamble to the Constitution made it clear that individual liberties would be protected under the government it outlined? (6.12.e, 6.12.f, 6.12.h)

- » The ideals included in the preamble—justice, tranquility, welfare, and liberty—are hallmarks of a society in which individual freedoms are protected and the power of government comes from the people, not from the states.

“The Bill of Rights,” pages 9–11

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Invite volunteers to read the section on pages 9–11 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term probable cause, and explain its meaning.

SUPPORT—Explain that the Enlightenment was a movement that began in Europe in the eighteenth century and spread to other places. It emphasized logic and reason as a means to analyze politics, religion, philosophy, science, and art.

SUPPORT—Point out the Third Amendment in the Bill of Rights chart. Explain that it is a direct response to colonists having to house British soldiers before the Revolution.

After the volunteers read the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—How many amendments make up the Bill of Rights? (6.12.i)

- » Ten amendments make up the Bill of Rights.

LITERAL—Aside from individuals, whose rights are protected in the Bill of Rights? (6.12.i)

- » States’ rights are protected in the Bill of Rights.

LITERAL—What rights are protected by the First Amendment? (6.12.i)

- » The First Amendment protects freedoms of religion, speech, press, assembly, and petition.

LITERAL—How many amendments guarantee protection for people accused of a crime? (6.12.i)

- » Four out of the ten amendments guarantee protection for people accused of a crime.

“The Commerce Clause and Native Americans,” pages 11–12

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Have students read the section on pages 11–12 independently.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term judicial review, and explain its meaning.

SUPPORT—Review the wording of the Commerce Clause on page 5: “Congress shall have the power . . . to regulate commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes.”

After students read the text, ask the following questions:

EVALUATIVE—Why was the wording of the Commerce Clause important as it related to Native Americans? (6.12.g)

- » It ensured that the federal government alone, not the states, had the authority to trade with Native American nations.

LITERAL—What was the outcome of the Supreme Court decisions Johnson v. McIntosh, Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, and Worcester v. Georgia? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b)

- » These Supreme Court decisions stated that Native American nations were to be recognized as distinct nations that could rule themselves without interference, but the federal government later ignored these decisions.

Primary Source Feature: “Excerpt From Federalist Number 84 (1788) by Alexander Hamilton,” page 13

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Direct students to the first Primary Source Feature on page 13.

Introduce the source by reminding students what they read about The Federalist Papers. Explain that this is one of the eighty-five essays that became part of The Federalist Papers.

Read the text aloud while students follow along.

SUPPORT—Point out the word provisions in the first paragraph. Explain that a provision is a requirement.

SUPPORT—Explain that Anti-Federalists wanted a bill of rights to be included in the Constitution because they were concerned that the powerful central government that the Federalists supported would limit the rights of citizens. Federalists such as Alexander Hamilton believed the Constitution did not need a bill of rights to protect citizens' liberties.

Distribute Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2), and have students complete the Activity Page independently.

After students have completed the Activity Page, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—What are two of the responses mentioned by Hamilton to those who criticized the lack of a bill of rights? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.12.e, 6.12.i)

- » Many states lacked a bill of rights, and the proposed Constitution already contained provisions that protected individual liberties.

EVALUATIVE—Why did Hamilton believe a bill of rights could be dangerous? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.12.e, 6.12.i)

- » He was concerned that a bill of rights would suggest the government has more powers than actually granted and be used to justify claims that more rights were granted.

EVALUATIVE—How did Hamilton argue that there were already bills of rights? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.12.e, 6.12.i)

- » He said the proposed Constitution was itself a bill of rights and the constitutions of each state were bills of rights.

Primary Source Feature: "From the Bill of Rights," page 13

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Direct students to the second Primary Source Feature on page 13.

Introduce the source by reminding students what they read about the Bill of Rights. Explain that these are the first and last amendments in the Bill of Rights.

Invite a volunteer to read the First Amendment aloud.

SUPPORT—Explain the meaning of the following terms when they are encountered in the text:

abridging, v. limiting redress, n. remedy or rectification

SUPPORT—Point out the two parts of the freedom of religion provision: the establishment clause and the free exercise clause. Explain that the establishment clause means that the government is not allowed to support or endorse any religion. The free exercise clause means that the government is not allowed to interfere with a person's practice of their religion—or their choice to not practice any religion at all.

SUPPORT—Explain that freedom of speech is not absolute. It has limits. Give examples of those limits, such as the following: the government can prohibit people from using speech that directly harms another person, such as encouraging others to commit violence or printing lies about someone (libel).

Invite volunteers to read the Ninth and Tenth Amendments aloud.

SUPPORT—Explain the meanings of the following terms when they are encountered in the text:

enumeration, n. the act of specifically establishing a certain number of things construed, v. interpreted disparage, v. to claim that something has little value

Have students paraphrase each amendment.

Distribute Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2), and have students complete the Activity Page independently.

After students have completed the Activity Page, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—What does the First Amendment address? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.12.i)

- » The First Amendment addresses freedoms of speech, religion, press, assembly, and petition.

EVALUATIVE—A city council bans people in its community from attending church. Is this a violation of the First Amendment? Why or why not? (6.12.i)

- » Yes, this violates the First Amendment. The government cannot ban people from practicing their religion.

LITERAL—Which powers does the Constitution grant to the states? (6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.12.i)

- » The Constitution grants to the states all powers not specifically granted to the federal government.

Timeline Card Slide Deck

- Show students the Chapter 1 Timeline Cards. Read and discuss the captions, making particular note of any dates.

- Invite students to note any comparisons with events previously studied or any examples of change or continuity that they notice. (6.1, 6.2, 6.3)
- Review and discuss the Framing Question: “How did the debate between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists lead to the Bill of Rights?”

CHECK FOR UNDERSTANDING 10 MIN

Ask students to:

- Write a short answer to the Framing Question: “How did the debate between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists lead to the Bill of Rights?”
 - » Key points students should include: the Federalists wanted a government strong enough to handle problems and commerce between the states and pay debts; the Anti-Federalists were worried the Constitution gave the federal government too much power, and it would trample individual rights; the Bill of Rights was proposed as a compromise because it would guarantee individual rights and limit federal powers to only those outlined in the Constitution.
- Choose one of the Core Vocabulary terms (ratify, nonpartisan, probable cause, or judicial review), and write a sentence using the term.

To wrap up the lesson, ask several students to share their responses.

Note: Distribute copies of Letter to Family (AP 1.1) for students to take home.

THE CORE LESSON 35 MIN

Introduce “Structures, Powers, and Functions of the U.S. Government”

5 MIN

Review what students read in Chapter 1 about the ratification debate between the Federalists and Anti-Federalists and the creation of the Bill of Rights. Explain that in this chapter, they will read about the government created by the Constitution.

Call students' attention to the Framing Question. Tell students to pay attention to the three branches of the United States government and how they work together.

Guided Reading Supports for “Structures, Powers, and Functions of the U.S. Government”

30 MIN

When you or a student reads aloud, always prompt students to follow along. By following along, students may acquire a greater understanding of the content. Remember to provide discussion opportunities.

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Invite volunteers to read the section on pages 14–17 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary terms popular sovereignty, rule of law, federalism, and checks and balances, and explain their meanings.

 SUPPORT—Direct students back to the preamble to the Constitution on page 6 in Chapter 1. Point out the first three words—"We the People"—and explain that this reflects the idea of popular sovereignty. Make sure students understand that it is up to the American people to ensure that their government respects and abides by the Constitution.

 SUPPORT—Point out the word federal in the third paragraph. Explain that the word is sometimes used to refer to the national government.

 SUPPORT—Point out the checks and balances diagram on page 17, and ask the following questions: Which branch has the power to nominate judges? (the executive branch) Which branch has the power to impeach the president? (the legislative branch) Which branch has the power to declare laws unconstitutional? (the judicial branch)

After the volunteers read the text, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What are the four strong guiding principles on which the Constitution is based? (6.12.j)

- » The four guiding principles of the Constitution are (1) governments get their power from the consent of the people (popular sovereignty), (2) limited government, (3) separation of powers, and (4) federalism.

INFERENTIAL—How does the Bill of Rights relate to the principle of limited government? (6.12.i, 6.12.j)

- » The Bill of Rights guarantees many individual rights that the government cannot take away.

 LITERAL—What are the three branches of government? (6.12.k)

- » The three branches of government are the legislative branch, the executive branch, and the judicial branch.

 LITERAL—What are checks and balances? (6.12.j)

- » Checks and balances are a division of power that lets each branch of the government stop the others from becoming too powerful.

"The Legislative Branch," pages 18–20

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Have students read the section on pages 18–20 with a partner.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary terms appropriation, budget, levy, and oversight, and explain their meanings.

SUPPORT—Explain that the "People's House" is also a reference to the fact that in its beginnings, the House of Representatives was the only house of Congress directly elected by the people.

 SUPPORT—Explain that Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands are U.S. territories. Explain what this means politically. (People in these regions do not have voting representation in Congress and are unable to participate in the general vote for the president.)

SUPPORT—Explain that the presiding officer is the person who conducts meetings.

SUPPORT—Explain that only three presidents have ever been impeached (Andrew Johnson, Bill Clinton, Donald Trump), but none have ever been convicted by the Senate.

 SUPPORT—Have students look up who their congressional representative and U.S. senators are.

 SUPPORT—Draw students' attention to the diagram on page 19. Have students explain what happens to a bill once it passes the vote in the chamber where it began. (It is sent to the other chamber for debate, modification, and a vote. Then, if approved, it is sent to the president to be signed into law or vetoed.) (6.12.k)

After students read the text, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What are four powers of the legislative branch? (6.12.l)

- » Four powers of the legislative branch are the power to make laws, to declare war, to regulate commerce, and to borrow money.

 EVALUATIVE—How is representation different in the House of Representatives and the Senate? (6.12.l)

- » The House of Representatives has members based on the population of each state. The Senate has two members from each state.

"The Executive Branch," pages 20–21

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Read the section on pages 20–21 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term executive order, and explain its meaning.

 SUPPORT—Explain that the president does not usually negotiate treaties in person. Instead, other members of the executive branch, usually from the State Department, negotiate on behalf of the president.

 SUPPORT—Explain that treaties signed by the president are not final until they are approved by the Senate; Senate approval authorizes the executive branch to exchange the treaty with the foreign power. This is one example of a check on the power of the executive branch held by the legislature. Throughout U.S. history, the Senate has approved most treaties. One exception is the Treaty of Versailles that ended World War I. President Woodrow Wilson and leaders in the Senate disagreed over the terms of the treaty, causing the Senate not to ratify it. In modern history, presidents have often formed international agreements called “executive agreements” that do not require the consent of the Senate but are still legally binding.

SUPPORT—Inform students that the Constitution created an executive branch headed by a president with the power to appoint executive department heads, but it did not describe any departments. It was left to the first president to create departments and offices within the executive branch to enable it to do its work. President George Washington proposed and Congress approved four officials: a secretary of state, a secretary of the treasury, a secretary of war, and an attorney general. Washington used his appointees as advisers and delegated to them the responsibilities of creating and running agencies. Over time, more departments were created. Today, there are fifteen departments represented in the president’s cabinet.

After reading the text, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What roles does the president have in addition to chief executive? (6.12.k, 6.12.l)

- » The president is head of state, commander in chief of the military, and head of government.

 LITERAL—What executive power allows the president to check the power of the legislative branch? (6.12.j, 6.12.l)

- » The president may check the power of the legislative branch by vetoing bills.

 EVALUATIVE—How do executive orders differ from legislation? (6.12.k, 6.12.l)

- » While executive orders have the effect of laws, they do not require the approval of Congress. Instead, executive orders are a way for the president to shape public policy by circumventing the power of Congress.

"The Judicial Branch," pages 21–22

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Invite volunteers to read the section on pages 21–22 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary terms appeal and original jurisdiction, and explain their meanings.

 SUPPORT—Display the judicial federalism diagram. Explain that this diagram illustrates the judicial pyramid mentioned in the second paragraph of the section. Talk students through the diagram, emphasizing the position of the Supreme Court at the top of the system.

 SUPPORT—Remind students that members of the federal judiciary are not elected; they are appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate.

After the volunteers read the text, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What powers does Congress have over the judicial branch? (6.12.j, 6.12.l)

- » Congress has the power to create or abolish courts, to add to or subtract from the number of judges in the federal court system, and to determine the jurisdiction of the courts.

 LITERAL—What is the role of the Supreme Court in government? (6.12.j, 6.12.l)

- » The Supreme Court hears appeals from lower courts, hears cases that involve conflict between states, and has the final say on whether or not a law adheres to the Constitution.

 LITERAL—What does the chief justice do? (6.12.l)

- » The chief justice serves as the head of the Supreme Court and presides when the court is in session. The chief justice also determines which justice should write the opinion when a ruling has been made on a case.

"Elections and Offices," pages 22–24

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Have students read the section on pages 22–24 independently.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary term popular vote, and explain its meaning.

SUPPORT—Explain to students that Nebraska and Maine are the only states that do not use a "winner takes all" approach to the Electoral College. Instead, they use a system of proportional representation. In these states, two electoral votes (corresponding to the state's two Senate seats) are allotted based on the winner of the overall state popular vote. Additionally, the winner of the popular vote in each congressional district gets one electoral vote.

SUPPORT—Draw students’ attention to the chart on page 23. Point out the first qualification for president. Explain that the “natural-born citizen” requirement means that an immigrant—even one that has naturalized and become a U.S. citizen—cannot be president.

SUPPORT—Draw students’ attention to the map on page 24. Have students count the number of states (including Washington, D.C.) for each candidate. (twenty-seven for Obama and twenty-four for Romney). Have them compare the number of states each candidate won to the number of electoral votes each candidate won. (Romney won nearly as many states, but Obama won many more electoral votes.) (6.12.I)

After students read the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—What are the qualifications for a person to become president? (6.12.I)

- » In order to become president, a person must be a natural-born citizen, be at least thirty-five years old, and have lived in the United States for at least fourteen years.

EVALUATIVE—How are the qualifications for the House of Representatives and the Senate alike and different? (6.12.I)

- » Both chambers of Congress require that their members live in the state they represent at the time of the election. The chambers have different age requirements—twenty-five for the House and thirty for the Senate. The Senate requires that its members have lived in the United States at least nine years, whereas the House requires that its members have lived in the United States for at least seven years.

“Federalism,” pages 24–25

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Invite volunteers to read the section on pages 24–25 aloud.

CORE VOCABULARY—Point out the vocabulary terms enumerated powers, reserved powers, and concurrent powers, and explain their meanings.

SUPPORT—Remind students of the debate about ratification of the Constitution. Americans were not just worried that the federal government would infringe on their personal freedoms; they were also worried that it would infringe on the power of the states.

SUPPORT—Display the Venn diagram of federal and state powers, and point out the enumerated, reserved, and concurrent powers. Ask the following questions: Who has more specified powers, the federal government or state governments? (the federal government) Who is allowed to levy and collect taxes? (both the federal and state governments) Who can maintain a militia? (the state governments) (6.4, 6.6, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.6.c, 6.7.b, 6.7.c)

After the volunteers read the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—Why did the Framers of the Constitution deny the federal government certain powers? (6.12.i, 6.12.j)

- » The Framers of the Constitution denied the federal government certain powers because they feared it would become too powerful.

EVALUATIVE—Why is the Tenth Amendment significant? (6.12.i, 6.12.j)

- » The Tenth Amendment is significant because it directly limits the federal government's power.

"Amending the Constitution," pages 25–26

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Read the section on pages 25–26 aloud.

SUPPORT—Inform students that the Constitution has been amended twenty-seven times, including the Bill of Rights. The most recent amendment was ratified in 1992.

SUPPORT—Explain that the Third Amendment ("No soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law") has never been tried at the level of the Supreme Court because it is very rarely contested, unlike many of the other amendments.

SUPPORT—Draw students' attention to the chart on pages 25 and 26. Have students identify the amendment that abolished slavery. (Thirteenth Amendment) Have students discuss the ways these amendments expanded the rights of Americans. (Answers will vary, but students should note that the Thirteenth Amendment said that all people must be free; the Fourteenth Amendment said that all people born in the United States should be citizens and have the rights of citizenship, including due process; the Nineteenth Amendment gave women the right to vote; and the Twenty-Fourth Amendment outlawed poll taxes that made it hard for some people to vote.)

After reading the text, ask the following questions:

LITERAL—How many states have to ratify an amendment before it becomes part of the Constitution? (6.12.k)

- » Three-fourths of states have to ratify an amendment before it becomes part of the Constitution.

LITERAL—Who has upheld the rights guaranteed within the Bill of Rights throughout the nation’s history? (6.12.i)

- » The Supreme Court has upheld the rights guaranteed within the Bill of Rights throughout the nation’s history.

“The Final Factor,” page 27

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Have students read the section on page 27 with a partner.

 SUPPORT—Point out the quotation from Benjamin Franklin (“A republic, if you can keep it”). Students may have heard people say that the United States is a republic, not a democracy. Make sure students understand that a republic is a type of democracy. It is a representative democracy, meaning that Americans vote for people to represent, or speak for, them in government. Typically, when people say the United States isn’t a democracy, they mean it is not a direct democracy, in which citizens themselves vote on specific issues rather than elect representatives.

After students read the text, ask the following questions:

EVALUATIVE—What is one major reason for the success of the Constitution? Why? (6.7, 6.7.a, 6.12.i, 6.12.j)

- » One major reason for the success of the Constitution is the American people. They have respected the Constitution and have taken care to preserve it.

INFERENTIAL—Why do you think Benjamin Franklin specified “if you can keep it” when talking about the new United States government? (6.12.j)

- » Benjamin Franklin knew that it was up to the American people to protect the Constitution and participate in the government it created and that if people did not do those things, those hungry for power might abuse the system to get rid of the protections it afforded.

Primary Source Feature: “From Article I of the U.S. Constitution,” page 28

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Direct students to the Primary Source Feature on page 28.

Introduce the source by reviewing with students the three branches of government created by the Constitution and the main responsibilities of each.

Invite volunteers to read the excerpt aloud.

SUPPORT—Point out that this excerpt is from Article I of the Constitution. Ask: What does Article I of the Constitution do? (It describes the legislative branch, or Congress.) What is this excerpt describing? (It lists the powers of Congress and describes how a bill becomes law.)

SUPPORT—Explain that when the president does not return a bill before Congress adjourns, it is called a pocket veto.

Have students compare Section 7 with the diagram on page 19. Ask: What is the same? What is different? (Both versions have bills sent to the president for signing. In the excerpt, if the president doesn't sign it, the bill is returned to Congress with objections, and Congress can reconsider it. In the diagram, the president can veto the bill, in which case it can go back to Congress to be reconsidered.)

Distribute Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2), and have students complete the Activity Page with a partner.

After students have completed the Activity Page, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What is required for an impeached official to be convicted? (6.12.l)

» To be convicted, two-thirds of the Senate must vote to convict.

 LITERAL—How many days does the president have to sign or veto a bill before it becomes a law? (6.12.k)

» The president has ten days to sign or veto a bill before it becomes a law.

 LITERAL—What can Congress do if the president vetoes a bill? (6.12.k)

» Congress can reconsider the bill and overturn the veto with a two-thirds vote.

EVALUATIVE—Why do you think the names of the people who vote for and against a bill are recorded? (6.12.k)

» The names of the people who vote for and against a bill are recorded so that voters know how the members of Congress who represent them voted on bills. If their senators and representatives do not vote in alignment with their views, voters might not reelect them.

INFERENTIAL—Why do you think the Framers included the president in the process of a bill becoming a law? (6.12.j, 6.12.k)

» The Framers included the president because, as part of the executive branch, the president provides checks and balances on the legislative branch.

EVALUATIVE—Why did the Framers specify in Section 8 that Congress has the power to collect taxes and pay debts? (6.2, 6.12.c, 6.12.l)

- » The Framers specified that Congress has the power to collect taxes and pay debts because collecting taxes and paying debts were problems under the Articles of Confederation. Under the Articles, states were expected to voluntarily contribute taxes and debt payments, but they didn't and Congress had no power to force them.

Primary Source Feature: "From Article II of the U.S. Constitution," page 29

Scaffold understanding as follows:

Direct students to the Primary Source Feature on page 29.

Introduce the source to students by saying that they just read an excerpt from the Constitution that describes the legislative branch. Now they're going to learn about what the Constitution says about the executive branch.

Invite volunteers to read the source aloud.

SUPPORT—Explain that the executive of any organization, including the government, is in charge of running its operations. The president is most responsible for ensuring that the different parts of the government are carrying out the laws of the United States.

TURN AND TALK—Ask students to work with a partner to list different treaties they have learned about. As time allows, ask pairs to share their lists.

Distribute Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2), and have students complete the Activity Page with a partner.

After students have completed the Activity Page, ask the following questions:

 LITERAL—What portion of the Senate needs to vote in favor of a treaty for it to go into effect? (6.12.I)

- » Two-thirds of the Senate needs to vote in favor of a treaty for it to go into effect.

 LITERAL—Who does the president have the power to nominate? (6.12.I)

- » The president has the power to nominate ambassadors, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States.

INFERENTIAL—Why do you think the Constitution indicates that the president must receive the advice and consent of the Senate to make treaties and nominate officers? (6.12.I)

- » The Framers of the Constitution did not want the president to have the power to act alone. By requiring the advice and consent of the Senate, the Framers ensured that more than one person would be involved in important decisions.

Timeline Card Slide Deck

- Show students the Chapter 2 Timeline Cards. Read and discuss the captions.
- Invite students to note any comparisons with events previously studied or any examples of change or continuity they notice. (6.1, 6.2, 6.3)
- Review and discuss the Framing Question: “What is the structure of the U.S. government, and how does it function?”

CHECK FOR UNDERSTANDING 10 MIN

Ask students to:

- Write a short answer to the Framing Question: “What is the structure of the U.S. government, and how does it function?”
 - » Key points students should cite include: the U.S. government is divided into three branches—legislative, executive, and judicial; the legislative branch primarily makes laws, the executive branch primarily determines how laws are carried out, and the judicial branch primarily interprets laws; checks and balances such as veto, impeachment, and declaring laws unconstitutional help ensure that no one branch becomes too powerful; the Constitution gives some powers to the federal government, and all other powers are given to the states; the Constitution can be amended with congressional approval and ratification by the states.
- Choose one of the Core Vocabulary terms (popular sovereignty, rule of law, federalism, checks and balances, appropriation, budget, levy, oversight, executive order, appeal, original jurisdiction, popular vote, enumerated powers, reserved powers, or concurrent powers), and write a sentence using the term.

To wrap up the lesson, ask several students to share their responses.

But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

AP 1.3

Ask students to give a presentation in response to the following prompt. Encourage students to use information from their Student Reader and Additional Activities in their responses. Have students use the Claims and Evidence Activity Page (AP 1.3) to organize their thoughts and plan their presentations.

Prompt:

To what extent is the U.S. government “of the people, by the people, and for the people”? (6.1, 6.2, 6.3, 6.6.a, 6.6.b, 6.6.c, 6.6.d, 6.7.a, 6.7.b, 6.7.c, 6.7.d, 6.12.f, 6.12.h, 6.12.i, 6.12.j, 6.12.k, 6.12.l)

A sample table, completed with possible notes, is provided below to serve as a reference for teachers, should some prompting or scaffolding be needed to help students get started.

Sample Claim:	The U.S. government is very much “of the people, by the people, for the people.”
Reason:	The structure and function of the U.S. government as outlined in the Constitution include electing leaders from among the general population, allowing for changes if the government is no longer serving the needs of the country, and being designed to protect individuals against tyranny and loss of freedoms.
Evidence:	The Framers of the Constitution were very wary of setting up a government that could lead to the sort of tyranny they had experienced under British rule. To avoid this, the Constitution was written to have leaders elected from among the people, divide the powers of government among many different people in different branches, ensure each branch would have checks and balances on the others, and protect individual freedoms and limit the scope of the federal government. The Framers built the Constitution around the concept of popular sovereignty, the idea that leaders get their authority from the people they govern. To support this concept, elections are held regularly for the positions in the executive and legislative branches. The people can choose to keep their leaders if they like the work they are doing or replace them if they do not.
Counterclaim and Answer:	Some people may claim that the government is not by, of, and for the people to a high degree. They may especially point to the Electoral College as an example of this, because the candidate who wins the popular vote for president is not always the one who wins the electoral vote. However, they must keep in mind that the Constitution itself can be changed. If enough Americans feel that this practice is unjust, the Constitution can be amended to end it. The fact that this has not yet happened shows that the way the government works still serves the American people.

Performance Task Scoring Rubric

Note: Students should be evaluated on the basis of their presentations using the rubric.

Students should not be evaluated on the completion of the Claims and Evidence Activity Page (AP 1.3), which is intended to be a support for students as they think about their responses.

3	Response is accurate, detailed, and persuasive. It addresses all parts of the prompt. The claim is clearly stated, well-developed, and fully supported with relevant information that includes both content knowledge and source details. The response demonstrates sound, cohesive reasoning and analysis, making insightful and well-explained connections between the claim, information, and evidence. The presentation is clearly articulated, is focused, and demonstrates strong understanding of the U.S. Constitution and its ratification process; a few minor errors may be present. Response may cite some or all of the following details: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• The Framers of the Constitution wanted to avoid the kind of tyranny they had suffered under British rule.• They wrote separation of powers into the Constitution to ensure this aim.• They laid out a system of checks and balances to prevent any branch of government from becoming too powerful.• They also protected individual freedoms with the Bill of Rights.• All the people in the U.S. government come from the general public. No positions are inherited.• The Constitution is built on the principle of popular sovereignty. This is upheld by having regular elections for the executive and judicial branches.
2	Response is mostly accurate, is somewhat detailed, and addresses the prompt. The claim is clearly stated and sufficiently supported and developed with some relevant information that includes both content knowledge and source details. The response demonstrates a general understanding of the U.S. Constitution and its ratification process, with analysis and reasoning that are somewhat cohesive and sound but may be uneven. Connections between the claim, information, and evidence are made, but some explanations may be missing or unclear. The presentation is organized and demonstrates control of conventions, but some minor errors may be present.

1	Response shows effort but is incomplete or limited and only partially addresses the prompt. The claim may be inaccurate or vague, but it is supported by at least one piece of relevant information or evidence. The response shows some understanding of the U.S. Constitution and its ratification process, but analysis and reasoning, while accurate, are vague, incomplete, or lacking connections. The presentation may also exhibit issues with organization and/or focus.
0	Response is too brief or unclear to evaluate. It lacks an identifiable claim, accurate or relevant supporting information, and accurate analysis or reasoning. The response demonstrates minimal or no understanding of the U.S. Constitution and its ratification process. The presentation may exhibit major issues with organization and/or focus.

Letter to Family

During the next few weeks, as part of our study of the Bayou Bridges Louisiana Social Studies program, your child will be learning about the U.S. Constitution and the process of ratifying it. They will learn about the debate between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists. They will learn about the Bill of Rights. They will learn about separation of powers and checks and balances. They will also learn about the responsibilities of each of the branches of government.

In this unit, students will investigate the debate between the Federalists and Anti-Federalists and how it led to the addition of the Bill of Rights to the Constitution. They will learn about the principles embodied by the Constitution and the structure and functions of the government it created. They will learn how bills become laws and how our leaders are elected. They will also learn how the Constitution can be changed.

As part of their exploration, students will also read about the way Native Americans are recognized in the Constitution. This information is presented in a factual, age-appropriate way rather than in a manner that suggests the value or correctness of any particular culture or group. The goal is to foster understanding of and respect for people and communities that may be different from those with which students are familiar.

Sometimes students have questions regarding how the information they are learning relates to themselves and their own experiences. In such instances, we will encourage each student to discuss such topics with you. We recognize that the best place to find answers to those types of questions is with your family and the adults at home.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Federalist No. 1

Alexander Hamilton wrote this essay about the debate over the Constitution.

After an unequivocal experience of the inefficiency of the subsisting federal government, you are called upon to deliberate on a new Constitution for the United States of America. The subject speaks its own importance; comprehending in its consequences nothing less than the existence of the UNION, the safety and welfare of the parts of which it is composed, the fate of an empire in many respects the most interesting in the world. It has been frequently remarked that it seems to have been reserved to the people of this country, by their conduct and example, to decide the important question, whether societies of men are really capable or not of establishing good government from reflection and choice, or whether they are forever destined to depend for their political constitutions on accident and force. If there be any truth in the remark, the crisis at which we are arrived may with propriety be regarded as the era in which that decision is to be made. . . .

Among the most formidable of the obstacles which the new Constitution will have to encounter may readily be distinguished the obvious interest of a certain class of men in every State to resist all changes which may hazard a diminution of the power, emolument, and consequence of the offices they hold under the State establishments. . . .

And yet, however just these sentiments will be allowed to be, we have already sufficient indications that it will happen in this as in all former cases of great national discussion. A torrent of angry and malignant passions will be let loose. . . . An enlightened zeal for the energy and efficiency of government will be stigmatized as the offspring of a temper fond of despotic power and hostile to the principles of liberty. An over-scrupulous jealousy of danger to the rights of the people, which is more commonly the fault of the head than of the heart, will be represented as mere pretense and artifice, the stale bait for popularity at the expense of the public good. It will be forgotten, on the one hand, that jealousy is the usual concomitant of love, and that the noble enthusiasm of liberty is apt to be infected with a spirit of narrow and illiberal distrust. On the other hand, it will be equally forgotten that the vigor of government is essential to the security of liberty; that, in the contemplation of a sound and well-informed judgment, their interest can never be separated. . . .

1. What does Hamilton say are the consequences of the vote regarding the Constitution?

2. What reason does Hamilton give as to why some people will resist the new Constitution?

3. What does Hamilton say about people with “an enlightened zeal for the energy and efficiency of government”?

4. What does Hamilton say is essential to the security of liberty?

Use with Chapter 1

It may perhaps be thought superfluous to offer arguments to prove the utility of the UNION, a point, no doubt, deeply engraved on the hearts of the great body of the people in every State, and one, which it may be imagined, has no adversaries. But the fact is, that we already hear it whispered in the private circles of those who oppose the new Constitution, that the thirteen States are of too great extent for any general system, and that we must of necessity resort to separate confederacies of distinct portions of the whole. This doctrine will, in all probability, be gradually propagated, till it has votaries enough to countenance an open avowal of it. For nothing can be more evident, to those who are able to take an enlarged view of the subject, than the alternative of an adoption of the new Constitution or a dismemberment of the Union.

5. To which point made earlier in the essay does Hamilton return at the end of his argument?

unequivocal, adj. without any doubt; clear; unquestionable diminution, n. the act of decreasing in size

emolument, n. compensation or other benefits of a job superfluous, adj. unnecessary or extravagant votaries, n. believers; advocates

avowal, n. an acknowledgement

Federalist No. 10

James Madison wrote this essay about the ways in which larger representative governments, as opposed to smaller representative governments, are more capable of stopping any one group from gaining too much power.

Among the numerous advantages promised by a well-constructed Union, none deserves to be more accurately developed than its tendency to break and control the violence of faction. . . .

By a faction, I understand a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or a minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adversed to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community. . . .

From this view of the subject it may be concluded that a pure democracy, by which I mean a society consisting of a small number of citizens, who assemble and administer the government in person, can admit of no cure for the mischiefs of faction. . . .

A republic, by which I mean a government in which the scheme of representation takes place, opens a different prospect, and promises the cure for which we are seeking. Let us examine the points in which it varies from pure democracy, and we shall comprehend both the nature of the cure and the efficacy which it must derive from the Union.

The two great points of difference between a democracy and a republic are: first, the delegation of the government, in the latter, to a small number of citizens elected by the rest; secondly, the greater number of citizens, and greater sphere of country, over which the latter may be extended.

The effect of the first difference is, on the one hand, to refine and enlarge the public views, by passing them through the medium of a chosen body of citizens, whose wisdom may best discern the true interest of their country, and whose patriotism and love of justice will be least likely to sacrifice it to temporary or partial considerations. Under such a regulation, it may well happen that the public voice, pronounced by the representatives of the people, will be more consonant to the public good than if pronounced by the people themselves, convened for the purpose. . . . The question resulting is, whether small or extensive republics are more favorable to the election of proper guardians of the public weal; and it is clearly decided in favor of the latter by two obvious considerations.

1. How does Madison define a faction?

2. What distinction does Madison draw between a pure democracy and a republic?

3. What personality traits does Madison name as those the chosen body of citizens would have?

Use with Chapter 1

In the first place, it is to be remarked that, however small the republic may be, the representatives must be raised to a certain number, in order to guard against the cabals of a few; and that, however large it may be, they must be limited to a certain number, in order to guard against the confusion of a multitude. . . .

In the next place, as each representative will be chosen by a greater number of citizens in the large than in the small republic, it will be more difficult for unworthy candidates to practice with success the vicious arts by which elections are too often carried; and the suffrages of the people being more free, will be more likely to center in men who possess the most attractive merit and the most diffusive and established characters. . . .

The other point of difference is, the greater number of citizens and extent of territory which may be brought within the compass of republican than of democratic government; and it is this circumstance principally which renders factious combinations less to be dreaded in the former than in the latter. . . . Extend the sphere, and you take in a greater variety of parties and interests; you make it less probable that a majority of the whole will have a common motive to invade the rights of other citizens; or if such a common motive exists, it will be more difficult for all who feel it to discover their own strength, and to act in unison with each other. . . .

Hence, it clearly appears, that the same advantage which a republic has over a democracy, in controlling the effects of faction, is enjoyed by a large over a small republic,—is enjoyed by the Union over the States composing it. . . .

In the extent and proper structure of the Union, therefore, we behold a republican remedy for the diseases most incident to republican government.

4. What does Madison say about the number of representatives of the republic?

5. Why does Madison argue that a union of states provides a better government than individual states?

actuated, v. put into motion; spurred to action

aggregate, adj. collective; taken together

weal, n. well-being cabals, n. groups engaged in a secret plot, such as to overthrow a government

Federalist No. 51

Either Alexander Hamilton or James Madison—the author’s identity is unclear—wrote this essay about how to structure government to guard against abuses of power and to protect the interests of all people.

In order to lay a due foundation for that separate and distinct exercise of the different powers of government, which to a certain extent is admitted on all hands to be essential to the preservation of liberty, it is evident that each department should have a will of its own; and consequently should be so constituted that the members of each should have as little agency as possible in the appointment of the members of the others. . . .

It is equally evident, that the members of each department should be as little dependent as possible on those of the others. . . . But the great security against a gradual concentration of the several powers in the same department, consists in giving to those who administer each department the necessary constitutional means and personal motives to resist encroachments of the others. The provision for defense must in this, as in all other cases, be made commensurate to the danger of attack. Ambition must be made to counteract ambition. The interest of the man must be connected with the constitutional rights of the place. It may be a reflection on human nature, that such devices should be necessary to control the abuses of government. But what is government itself, but the greatest of all reflections on human nature? If men were angels, no government would be necessary. . . . In framing a government which is to be administered by men over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself.

A dependence on the people is, no doubt, the primary control on the government; but experience has taught mankind the necessity of auxiliary precautions. This policy of supplying, by opposite and rival interests, the defect of better motives, might be traced through the whole system of human affairs, private as well as public. We see it particularly displayed in all the subordinate distributions of power, where the constant aim is to divide and arrange the several offices in such a manner as that each may be a check on the other. . . . These inventions of prudence cannot be less requisite in the distribution of the supreme powers of the State. But it is not possible to give to each department an equal power of self-defense. In republican government, the legislative authority necessarily predominates. The remedy for this inconveniency is to divide the legislature into different branches; and to render them, by different modes of election and different principles of action, as little connected with each other as the nature of their common functions and their common dependence on the society will admit. . . .

1. The author implies that it is human nature to do what?

2. What does the author say is the aim of distributions of power?

. . . In the compound republic of America, the power surrendered by the people is first divided between two distinct governments, and then the portion allotted to each subdivided among distinct and separate departments. Hence a double security arises to the rights of the people. The different governments will control each other, at the same time that each will be controlled by itself. . . . It is of great importance in a republic not only to guard the society against the oppression of its rulers, but to guard one part of the society against the injustice of the other part. Different interests necessarily exist in different classes of citizens. If a majority be united by a common interest, the rights of the minority will be insecure.

There are but two methods of providing against this evil: the one by creating a will in the community independent of the majority that is, of the society itself; the other, by comprehending in the society so many separate descriptions of citizens as will render an unjust combination of a majority of the whole very improbable, if not impracticable. The first method prevails in all governments possessing an hereditary or self-appointed authority. This, at best, is but a precarious security; because a power independent of the society may as well espouse the unjust views of the major, as the rightful interests of the minor party, and may possibly be turned against both parties. The second method will be exemplified in the federal republic of the United States. Whilst all authority in it will be derived from and dependent on the society, the society itself will be broken into so many parts, interests, and classes of citizens, that the rights of individuals, or of the minority, will be in little danger from interested combinations of the majority. . . .

. . . Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been and ever will be pursued until it be obtained, or until liberty be lost in the pursuit.

3. Why does the author say the legislature should be divided?
4. What “double security” does the author say protects the rights of the people?
5. The phrase “tyranny of the majority” refers to the tendency of the larger group of people to trample the rights of the smaller group in a democracy. Highlight or underline the part of the essay where the author addresses how the United States government will handle this problem.

Chapter 1

- A. 1. b, c 2. c, c 3. b 4. d 5. a, d 6. c 7. b 8. d 9. d 10. a
- B. Students should clearly state an accurate claim and support it with relevant evidence, such as the Anti-Federalists wanted to protect individual liberties, which the Bill of Rights does, and they were worried about overreach of the federal government, which the Bill of Rights limits, so they were likely appeased by its addition. Answers should include explanations of how the evidence supports the claim.

Chapter 2

- A. 1. c 2. a 3. a 4. a, c 5. b, e 6. a, d 7. b 8. c 9. c 10. c, c
- B. Students should clearly state an accurate claim and support it with relevant evidence, such as each branch has specific powers (e.g., Congress has the power to pass laws, the president has the power to veto laws); these different powers mean that each branch can do some things the others cannot; some of the powers of each branch provide checks on the other branches (e.g., Congress approves Supreme Court justices nominated by the president, the Supreme Court decides whether laws are constitutional). Answers should include explanations of how the evidence supports the claim.

Activity Pages

Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2): Chapter 1 Primary Source Feature, Excerpt from Federalist Number 84

Describe the source. The source is an excerpt from one of the Federalist Papers, Number 84.

Connect the source to what you know. The Federalist Papers were written to convince people that the Articles of Confederation needed to be replaced and the new Constitution was the best replacement.

Understand the source. Identify its message, purpose, and/or audience. Alexander Hamilton wrote this essay because critics of the proposed Constitution were concerned that it wouldn't protect individual liberty. Hamilton wanted to assure people that the Constitution didn't need a bill of rights to protect people's rights.

Draw a conclusion from or about the source. This essay was not convincing because the Bill of Rights was later added to the Constitution.

Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2): Chapter 1 Primary Source Feature, From the Bill of Rights

Describe the source. The source is an excerpt from the Bill of Rights.

Connect the source to what you know. These amendments to the U.S. Constitution were written very shortly after the Constitution itself was written.

Understand the source. Identify its message, purpose, and/or audience. These amendments were written as part of the compromise between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists. They were intended to protect individual freedoms and limit the power of the federal government.

Draw a conclusion from or about the source. Inclusion of these amendments helped the states ratify the Constitution, and they have been upheld through Supreme Court rulings ever since. They were an important addition to the Constitution.

Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2): Chapter 2 Primary Source Feature, From Article I of the U.S. Constitution

Describe the source. The source is excerpts from the article that describe the powers of Congress and how a bill becomes a law.

Connect the source to what you know. This source shows some of the separation of powers and checks and balances that are built into the U.S. government by the Constitution.

Understand the source. Identify its message, purpose, and/or audience. The purpose of this source is to explain the role of the legislative branch—what it can do and how it should work with the president to pass laws. It also shows the checks and balances of the lawmaking process.

Draw a conclusion from or about the source. The article is specific about the powers and processes of the legislative branch, which shows that the Framers put in a great deal of thought when crafting the Constitution.

Primary Source Analysis (AP 1.2): Chapter 2 Primary Source Feature, From Article II of the U.S. Constitution

Describe the source. The source is a section of the Constitution describing powers that the president has.

Connect the source to what you know. Whereas Article I explains the powers of the legislative branch, Article II explains the powers of another branch of government.

Understand the source. Identify its message, purpose, and/or audience. This section explains that the president leads the executive branch, is the commander in chief, can make treaties, and can nominate officers of the United States.

Draw a conclusion from or about the source. While the Framers gave the president a great deal of power in this article, they also placed checks on the office. They knew it was important to give other people in government the ability to limit the power of the president. They did not want the president to have as much control as the British monarchy.

Federalist No. 1 (AP 1.4)

1. Hamilton says the consequences of the vote regarding the Constitution are “nothing less than the existence of the Union.”
2. Hamilton says some people will resist the new Constitution because it diminishes the power they hold in state governments.
3. Hamilton says they will “be stigmatized as the offspring of a temper fond of despotic power and hostile to the principles of liberty.”
4. Hamilton says the “vigor of government” is essential to the security of liberty.
5. Hamilton returns to the consequence of voting for the Constitution and claims it will be the existence of the Union.

Federalist No. 10 (AP 1.5)

1. Madison defines a faction as “a number of citizens . . . united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adversed to the rights of other citizens, or . . . the community.”
2. Madison says a pure democracy is made up of a small number of citizens who all administer the government in person. A republic is a government in which representation takes place.
3. Madison names personality traits of wisdom, patriotism, and love of justice.
4. Madison says the number of representatives must be raised to a minimum and limited to a maximum.
5. Madison argues that a union provides a better government because it is a larger group of people, which is better able to elect good leaders.

Federalist No. 51 (AP 1.6)

1. The author implies that it is human nature to abuse power.
2. The author says the aim of distributions of power is to arrange offices in a way that each may be a check on the other.
3. The author says the legislature should be divided to make the different branches “as little connected with each other” as possible.
4. The author’s “double security” is a reference to the legislative power divided into two separate governments that each control themselves and the other.
5. Students should highlight “Whilst all authority in it will be derived from and dependent on the society, the society itself will be broken into so many parts, interests, and classes of citizens, that the rights of individuals, or of the minority, will be in little danger from interested combinations of the majority.”

Three Branches of Government (AP 2.1)

Students should fill in columns with details from the chapter, such as:

Legislative: House of Representatives (435 members) and Senate (100 members); makes laws; declares war; impeaches federal officials, including president; passes a budget and levies taxes; elected; serves two years (House) or six years (Senate)

Executive: president and cabinet; enforces laws; negotiates treaties; appoints judges; can veto bills; pardons criminals; elected; serves four years

Judicial: Supreme Court; hears appeals; decides in cases between states; determines whether laws are constitutional; appointed; serves for life
