A LIFE Promise for St. Bernard Students

Student demographics in St. Bernard have changed dramatically in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. The percentage of students in poverty has grown from 48% in 2004-2005 to over 76% this year. To meet the needs of our students, then, we must offer a data-driven curriculum emphasizing literacy and job-embedded training focused on the effectivess of our educators.

Need for Project: Our district has 11 schools. Four of those were in the original cluster in our successful Cohort 1 SRCL proposal, and we will expand, as required, to include three additional schools this year. Our proposed cluster for this application includes the remaining four schools. If we are able to put forth a successful proposal, our district will become a SRCL district, with implications for replication across districts and across schools.

Our proposal includes Lacoste and Davies Elementary Schools and their preschool programs. Their students feed into Trist Middle School and often into Rowley Alternative. Our parish has one traditional high school which is included in the original Cohort 1 cluster. Rowley, our high school, serves students in grades 9-12 in alternative programs and pathways.

The newly proposed cluster's schools each have percentages of free/reduced lunch that exceed 65%, as evidenced on Table 1. In addition, Rowley serves the largest percentage (26%) of students with disabilities (SWD) among our schools. More importantly, it is a failing school in terms of the state's accountability program. The other school's percentage of SWD is about 10%. Table 1 also shows that about 1% of each schools' students are homeless, and over 25% of the cluster's students are two or more years (see Other on Table 1) behind their peers and targeted as potential dropouts in our system's DEWS (dropout early warning system).

Because there are no remaining clusters of greatest need in our district eligible for consideration for SRCL, Table 2 is not applicable. The data on Table 3 indicates historical data for proposed cluster schools. Lacoste Elementary, however, is a new school, opening its doors for the first time August 2012. Lacoste is the final school to be opened as part of our district's hurricane rebuilding plan adopted in March 2006. Its students were relocated into Lacoste from Chalmette and Davies Elementary Schools, but no historical achievement data exists for Lacoste students in total. A quick glance at the data for Davies, Chalmette, and Trist Schools indicates that about ¼ of the students at each school are below proficient in ELA on state tests. At Rowley, 54% of students are below proficient on LEAP tests. While scores at most grade levels have improved over the past three years, as evidenced by Table 3A, we do see any significant growth, except perhaps at the 8th grade. We fear that our scores are static, and we realize that in order to see growth, we must focus on students' literacy skills and teacher effectiveness.

But more important is the data reflecting the achievement levels of disadvantaged students who are the target of SRCL. The following table shows the percent of students proficient by subgroup, the gap that exists between that subgroup and whole school achievement levels, and the numbers of students represented in that subgroup.

2012 subgroup	Davies Grades 3-5	Gap	# of students	Trist Grades 6-8	Gap	# of students	Rowley Grades 6-8	Gap	# of students
Whole	75.1	-	358	74.4	-	472	45.7	-	128
Eco. Dis.	71.8	-3.3	236	70.4	-4.0	326	46.4	.07	118
SWD	44.9	-30.2	36	54.5	-19.9	50	40.3	-5.4	38
LEP	23.4	-46.7	7	28.7	-45.7	7	100	54.3	1

Eco. Dis. = Economically Disadvantaged; SWD : Students with Disabilities; LEP - Limited English Proficiency

The gap between whole school proficiency levels and those levels for students with disabilities and limited English-speaking abilities is wide, and we must find a way to address the needs of these disadvantaged children. Though their population is small, these students comprise a group of over 100 students across the cluster, and their needs deserve meaningful attention.

Table 4 illustrates a true feeder program. Over 91% of kindergarteners at Davies attended preschool at that same site; over 92% of kindergarteners at Lacoste attended either Davies or Chalmette Elementary preschool programs. Similarly, 82% of the 6th graders at Trist attended Davies for 5th grade or live in Lacoste's attendance district. Of the high school students at Rowley, 42% attended Trist, with remaining students attending the other two middle schools.

Our Cohort 1 cluster schools' students have made some early academic progress. For example, Table 3B indicates increases in the percentage of students at benchmark at the winter testing as compared to the fall testing at most grade levels. Our greatest improvement has been at the middle school. Elementary schools and preschool results indicate we need to address teacher effectivness measures and the interventions they use.

Additional data collected in developing this proposal include results from our teachers' Compass. According to teacher scores, cluster teachers are weakest in teaching reading, though their students are competitive with peers across the state in other content areas, which echo the findings in the previous paragraph. Additionally, scores for honors teachers indicate that their students do not achieve at the same levels as their peers. This is also reflected in ACT scores which show students in the lowest quartile perform above the national average, while our students in the upper quartile are two points below the national average.

In year 2 of the grant, we will expand services to include Rowley's 4th - 8th grade students. This expansion will mean that all students will receive SRCL's services. Data has informed our plans for this proposal. We present the following goals with the purpose of SRCL and our district's progress toward the state's eight critical goals in mind.

Project Goals: Our application design centers on three goals:

• Job-embedded training and the use of technology to meet the diverse needs of students:

- Active involvement of staff in shaping strategies to address improved student literacy:
- Continuing use of data to drive all decision-making.

Specific district performance goals aligned to our 2016 Strategic Plan are in place in terms of desired learner outcomes for the spring of 2014:

GOALS

- 1. To increase to 75% the number of 4-year-olds who are at benchmark upon entry to kindergarten as measured on the fall DIBELS NEXT assessment with a 1% increase annually.
- 2. To increase the performance level of 50% of 1st and 2nd grade students by at least one level from winter to spring benchmark testing with a 3% increase annually.
- 3. To increase the % of students proficient on 3rd grade ELA iLEAP from 73% to 75% at Davies and to see 75% of students at Lacoste score in the proficient range with a 1% increase annually.
- 4. To increase the % of students proficient on 4th grade ELA LEAP from 62% to 64% at Davies and to see 75% of students at Lacoste score in the proficient range with a 1% increase annually.
- 5. To increase the % of students proficient on 5th grade ELA iLEAP from 70% to 72% at Davies and to see 72% of students at Lacoste score in the proficient range with a 1% increase annually.
- 6. To increase the % of students proficient on 8th grade ELA LEAP from 73% to 75% at Trist, with an increase of 1% in each subsequent year.
- 7. To close the gap in ELA scores between whole school/SWD students by 2% at all cluster schools and at each tested grade level, with a decrease of 1% in each subsequent year.
- 8. To close the gap in ELA scores between whole school/LEP students by 2% at all cluster schools and at each tested grade level, with a decrease of 1% in each subsequent year.
- 9. To target at least 50% proficiency on EOC English II and English III exams among students at Rowley who are on a regular diploma tract.
- 10. To target a .5 increase in ACT scores from their individual PLAN scores among 11th grade students at Rowley.
- 11. To increase teacher effectiveness as evidenced by a 1% increase annually in COMPASS scores in ELA at cluster schools.
- 12. To increase at each grade level the % of students scoring Mastery and/or Advanced by 2% in 2014 and by 1% in each subsequent year.

These goals complement the state's critical goals for school improvement and those in the state's SRCL grant application. We have been careful to address the gaps that exist in student achievement for disadvantaged populations, understanding that these are the students left unaddressed most often because of behaviors, severe learning difficulties, language barriers, and/or lack of training on the part of our teachers to deal with these specific needs. We have also been modest in our projection of improvement for the simple reason that we will be transitioning to PARCC assessments in 2014-15. Early indications illustrate states moving to full implementation of Common Core State Standards' (CCSS) assessments have seen student scores drop by as much as one-third. And while we feel confident that much of our early preparation work for the transition to CCSS will see our students maintain or increase in achievement levels, we are hesitant to project more than modest growth in the face of that transition.

In an effort to align our steps for reaching our district performance goals with the state's literacy plan and to delineate action to reach our SRCL goals, we offer the following:

The steps delineated here address those needs identified in preparation of the proposal, including enhancing students' literacy skills, closing achievement gaps, and job-embedded training, all based on data gleaned from student and teacher performance. Additionally, they give a framework for the design of the proposal.

Project Design: This proposal is built around two of the Focus Areas introduced in the state's Classroom Support Toolbox: collaboration and assessment and curriculum. Currently, there is a framework in place for transition to CCSS that includes district, school, and teacher collaboration. A district-level curriculum team meets monthly with the Assistant Superintendent to prepare for transition to CCSS, and that group works closely with an ELA leadership team of five teachers and principals. That team directs the scope/sequence/ assessment writing team of 20 teachers. There is also a Literacy Integration Specialist (LIS) at each school who meets monthly with district staff to prepare job-embedded PD experiences for teachers as we move to CCSS. Each school's LIS also serves as its Teacher/Leader Cadre representative.

Each school has data-teams to oversee data-driven decision-making and the collaborative examination of student work. They are assisted by the SRCL Data Specialist, and their work is monitored through monthly walkthroughs conducted by the Assistant Superintendent and SRCL Project Director, along with the principal and the LIS. Together, they examine project implementation, student performance data, literacy efforts in classrooms, and teacher collaboration. Additionally, the district staff and principals meet monthly to address teaching and learning, to examine student performance data, and to discuss common curricular concerns.

One by-product of data-teams at SRCL schools this past year is the decision to implement the use of the SpringBoard ELA curriculum at the middle and high school levels. SpringBoard is a pre-Advanced Placement program in ELA geared toward ACT and college readiness and is published by the College Board. SRCL schools are relying on this curriculum to increase rigor into classrooms and to enhance student achievement levels. The Specialists at SRCL schools presented data from state tests and from COMPASS that indicated rigor was lacking and suggested the use of SpringBoard as a way to enhance classroom rigor.

SRCL schools have indicated the need for additional technology resources, allowing teachers the opportunity to implement more individualized learning opportunities for students. Also, CCSS requires increased usage of technology resources and digital literacy. The district, through its Hurricane Educators' Assistance Program (HEAP) grant, provides technology consultants to teachers at SRCL schools to assist in integrating technology into their lessons and providing opportunities for blended learning. SRCL continues to provide after-school tutoring and summer bridge programs through which struggling students hone their literacy skills.

District-wide PD each year is based on results from teachers' Literacy Capacity surveys and collaboration with the teachers' union. The school literacy team prepares job-embedded PD weekly. In addition the LIS works with individual teachers. The district sponsors CCSS Thursdays for the curriculum writing and leadership teams, along with LDC Professional Learning Communities at the secondary level and weekly principal CCSS training.

A major initiative this school year is the district's efforts to train all 4th, 5th, ELA, science, and social studies teachers in the use of the Literacy Design Collaborative framework. The ELA team has set as its goal authentic literacy tasks for all students, and the LDC brings that easily into the classroom. SRCL schools, specifically, set the expectation for teachers to use a least one module per semester, and as teachers get more comfortable with LDC their use of the framework increases. Teachers still need training and support in the use of LDC, and SRCL enables teacher through an online platform.

In addition, the district has programs in place that address components of assessment and curriculum. We use common benchmark assessments which are administered to students each 9-week period. They are developed by the writing team mentioned above using EAGLE, PASS, released test items, and the state-wide Assessment Guide provided in the teacher toolbox. There is a district schedule for the administration of common progress monitoring assessments every two weeks in ELA for the purposes of determining the need for intervention. Schools undertake extensive collaborative reviews of student performance data. As a result district scope and sequence documents aligned to CCSS and PARCC-like assessments are continually revised as the year progresses and full implementation draws closer.

All of the teachers transitioning to CCSS have a common concern: more training on ideas and strategies that will not only make them successful in their transition to CCSS teaching. but also help them become more effective in the classroom – thereby enhancing their COMPASS scores and student achievement levels. An additional result of the SRCL experience is the professional learning opportunities provided at national conferences that have given the LIS and other school teacher leaders the opportunity to learn more about CCSS.

An area of concern for our preschool program is a lack of collaborative planning time for teachers. Through SRCL fund, our district can provide opportunities for those collaborative meetings with preschool leaders as both leaders and teacher prepare for the rigors of CCSS at their level. Our goal of kindergarten readiness will best be met as opportunities in increase teacher effectiveness at the early childhood level are deliberately plan and data-driven.

What is represented here is an on-going, cyclical process for school improvement that is both top-down and bottom-up. We are a "B" school district with 76% economically disadvanted students, the highest of any "A" or "B" district by far. The Assistant Superintendent and the SRCL Project Director spearhead much of the curriculum work in ELA, Social Studies, and Science as we transition to CCSS, ensuring that literacy plays an important role in each curriculum area. Teachers' preparation for the close reading of on-level, complex texts, their abilities to scaffold instructional tasks for students, the implementation of LDC and UDL strategies are each important parts of our literacy efforts as we attempt to reach every child. These must be priorities for our SRCL schools. School leaders, through their Data Teams, identify student needs which the LIS addresses those school-based PD or through recommendations in monthly meetings with district staff for scaled-up, district-wide training. Our writing teams prepare scope and sequence documents and benchmark assessments that will transition us to CCSS and increase rigor. Yet, what we are seeing, despite the emphasis on datadriven decisions, continuing examination of student products, and job-embedded PD to address teacher needs, are static student achievement scores, wide gaps in the achievement levels of disadvantaged students, and a lack of teacher buy-in and reluctance to collaborate with teacher leaders or administrators, which is a contributing factor to static results.

What cluster schools have proposed as an addition to the framework already in place is the implementation of school-wide Action Research¹. After training in Action Research for administrators and the LIS at the school, teams of teachers and principals will collaborate by choice to identify a problem area (such as the gap in achievement levels of SWD), gather all of the pertinent data, interpret it, and act on it. These teacher teams will be invited to research best practices for addressing the problem area, devise instructional strategies to address student weaknesses, pilot the approach in their classrooms, and then share results with the school's leadership team. They will then be invited to develop a plan for school-wide implementation of the approach, and the strategy will become part of job-embedded PD provided by the LIS and the proposing team. Teacher participants will each be paid a stipend of $1000 to problem-solve their school's concerns. This approach will increase a culture of teacher-defined progress, foster collegial interactions, create a collective interest, and effect real change in the school.

The district will leverage funds from Title II, our HEAP grant, Title 1, IDEA, and the general fund to provide a LIS at each SRCL site, assist with PD opportunities not provided by SRCL, help fund reading specialist certification expenses for the LIS, help fund anchor and supplemental texts for classroom libraries, and help fund technology for use in SRCL schools. Together, these funding sources, along with SRCL, can bring the complete package of transition to CCSS to our cluster schools.

Project Management Plan: An appropriate management plan is vital to the success of our proposal. Achieving our goals (pages 4) begins with proper planning this summer and PD opportunities for our teachers and leaders. PD tasks for Years 1 and 2 of the grant, outlined in project action steps on pages 5-6 include:

Task	Milestone	Person(s) Responsible
Training in effective use of	2013-14 progress monitoring	Director, Data Specialist, LIS.
interventions and technology	show student success in Tier 1	principal, teacher
Training in increasing rigor in	2013-14 benchmark scores;	Director, Data Specialist, LIS, instructional delivery	summative assessments	principal, teacher
Training in Guided Reading,	2013-14 end-of-year survey of	Director, Data Specialist, LIS,
Close Reading, Socratic	teachers	designated teachers
Seminars, LDC, Project Read, and UDL strategies
Constant revisiting of scope/	2013-14 end-of-year survey of	Director, Data Specialist, LIS.

alignment with CCSS and		and writers

related training for teachers
Establishing PLCs for	2013-14 focus groups and	Assist. Supt., Director, Data
administrators and teachers	school plans for 2014-15	Specialist, principals

Project Management responsibilities rest primarily with the Director, in association with the principals and specialists at each site. Once Year 1 and 2 milestones for teacher preparation are reviewed for effectiveness of tasks, and formative evaluation results are gathered, then planning for subsequent years, including the introduction of the new cluster population. Rowley's 4-8th graders, will take place.

The district's staff is in a posture to support our feeder systems through the organization already in place. The Assistant Superintendent, SRCL Director, and Data Specialist are heavily involved in data-driven literacy programs across seven of our 11 schools already, and the addition of the four in the new cluster, rounding out the entire district, will help consolidate meetings, trainings, the purchasing of materials and supplies, and curriculum and assessment preparation. The monthly meetings with LIS's, with principals, and curriculum teams will support the literacy efforts at the new SRCL schools.

Our students, as a whole group, are achieving. St. Bernard is gaining recognition of its continuing progress, and we live our motto: Vision...Effort...Success. Yet examination of data reveals too many disadvantaged students struggle each day. In order to be truly a school district that makes a difference, we have to address the needs of each child, every day. This application has helped us shape a new vision. Our effort, in partnership with the state through the SRCL grant, will mean success for disadvantaged children.
